Hi!

I think you are expecting to show the whole component in the module, but it isn't what is has been made for. The module is supposed to work with the component Joomla Web Messenger, so if you want to show just the contact list in any module position.

First, you should create a link to the component. From the component you can log in to your msn account and then, all your contacts will appear on the module.

You can see the component in your site with the URL:

http://ukgameplayers.com/index.php?option=com_jwebmessenger

Raúl

Ok ... thanks for the info. HOWEVER.....

What do you put in the "Personal Message" - Something like, a greeting?

BUT.....When typing something just above the button called Send Message, the send button, isnt active, so you cant "send" anything?

Do i need to chmod any folders or files?....

Have you tried using this component from my site?...if so, did it work, because it doesnt for me.

Are there any other tips you can give please?

By the way, you mention that "From the component you can log in to your msn account and then, all your contacts will appear on the module"

Well....I dont have this function available, or at least, I cant see it. Does it matter that I am already logged into MSN messenger?

Yes. People use to write a quote they like, a greeting, etc.

Do i need to chmod any folders or files?....
No, you don't.

When typing something just above the button called Send Message, the send button, isnt active, so you cant "send" anything?

The "Send" button will be active when you have an active conversation. You can active a conversation by clicking on a contact name from the contact list, and then , clicking again from the "Active conversations" area.

You cannot see your contacts because is a very narrow column on which it is placed. So you cannot click on them.

Follow this steps:

- 1.-Disable the module Joomla Web Messenger Contact List
- 2.-From the admin backend,check "Show Contacts List", and then login on your msn account from the front end. You will see your contacts in the main body of the site.

Once you've done that you can click on the contacts to add them to the active conversations.
To toggle between conversations just click on their names in the Active Conversations area.

Hope it helps,
Regards,
Raúl.

Nope.....doesnt work at all.

Disabled the module, tickbox checked to show contacts.

Any other help to offer before i delete this component?

IF you can use it FROM my site, let me know.....I will then tell if its my problem, or the softwares problem.

I entered in the URL

http://ukgameplayers.com/index.php?option=com_jwebmessenger

and I logged in to my msn account.

Now I can see my contacts, as you checked the "Show Contact List" and it seems to be working as it should. I even chatted with a friend of mine from your site! :D

If you dont see the login box is probably because you are already logged in. Try deleting the cookies from your browser and start again the log in. Or try accessing your site from another browser and you'll see the log in box.

Well, I'll try to be clear, what you see is not a typical log in form. What is shown is a button to Sign In, and then a new window is opened(the microsoft gateway). Maybe your browser is blocking that window??

For me, the component is working fine!

Good luck and do not hesitate to tell here your results / problems ;)

Raúl.

Ok...I think i have it working. I have had to upgrade to IE7, some of my members have tested it, but would like to know if there is an english translation of the software?

Re:Not showing

Ups, I forgot to leave it in Spanish.
The download has been updated to english here

Joomla Web Messenger

Anyway, you can choose your language by changing the last parameter 'en' to the selected language code. This line is on the file jwebmessenger.html.php, line 39.

__signin = new Microsoft.Live.Messenger.UI.SignInControl('signinframe', privUrl, chanUrl, 'en');

Hey Raul -

I looked at your position here on the installation of Joomla web messenger and I was able to successfully do that in Joomla 1.5

I can also see the component in the backend and have done the necessary configurations too and created a link to the component on my joomla website. However this renders an empty page.

What am I to do from here on? I read the thread but its still confusing. Could you give me a step-by-step on what needs to be done so that I can incorporate MSN web messenger into my joomla site?

Thx

Farid

"Sorry, there was a problem completing your request. Please try again later."

Maybe this is due to the fact i work at localhost....

You are right. The embeded code does not work at localhost

Thanks for your collaboration.

Raúl.

I compared the file you sent with the one I have and both have the exact same contents.

What piece of code did you add to make it work? I really dont see any differences between the two...

Appreciate your help

Thx

Farid

I take my original post back.

There was a slight change that I made to the jwebmessenger.php file and it worked. I was then able to see the login screen. I went through the steps and got stuck since I'm working on a local host Besides that; could you indicate to me why the footer and the bottom part of the image are blocking each other. Its almost as if there's a cutoff of the login image of MSN..

Thx

Farid

I didn't change the actual code, I changed the comment in the heading.

The original was:

```
/*
+-----+
| Joomla Web Messenger for Joomla 1.5
| jwebmessenger.php
+-----+
| Description:
|   Component used in conjunction with Windows Live Messenger
|   to make your web site a web messenger

|   http://www.gnu.org/copyleft/gpl.html
|
| Version:
|   1.0 ( March 2008)
+-----+
*/
```

I replaced it with:

```
/
* Joomla Web Messenger for Joomla 1.5
* jwebmessenger.php
* Description:
*   Component used in conjunction with Windows Live Messenger
*   to make your web site a web messenger

*
* Version:

That is all I did and it works.....

It looks like php doesn't know what to do with | or +, but i'm not a expert in PHP.

Because // is there php automatically doesn't do any thing with | + or any thing displayed within //

So don't really know how putting * has fixed your problem, btw I'm no expert in PHP ether...
